[Reasons for the Differences]

The consolidated sales of the Company decreased by 468 million yen from the previous forecasts announced on July 9, 2013 as sales booking of large orders, which the Company had expected to be in the fiscal year 2013, was delayed. The operating losses and ordinary losses both declined from the previous forecasts since valuation losses on inventory and some of the allowances of NPC-Meier GmbH, the European subsidiary of the Company, which had been supposed to be booked as sales cost, SG&A, etc., were booked as an extraordinary loss. However, net losses were hardly affected as these valuation losses and allowances were booked as loss on liquidation of subsidiaries and affiliates in extraordinary loss.

There was no major change in the total amount of extraordinary losses, however, there were differences between forecasts and results in accounting items. To be more concrete, reversal of foreign currency translation adjustment of 338 million yen, which had been expected to be as an extraordinary loss along with the closing of NPC-Meier GmbH in fiscal year 2013, was shifted to fiscal year 2014 as the closing of the German subsidiary completed on September 30, 2013. On the other hand, an extraordinary loss of 438 million yen was booked due to the impairment loss related to some of the assembly lines in Matsuyama Factory, which had not been anticipated at the previous forecast issuance. As a result, no major change occurred in net losses.

Sales, operating loss, and ordinary loss in non-consolidated business result were almost the same as the previous forecasts announced on July 9, 2013, however, the difference between non-consolidated business forecasts and results occurred as follows. Net losses increased by 1,141 million yen from the previous forecasts due to extraordinary losses of the impairment loss related to the assembly lines in Matsuyama Factory described above and the losses on liquidation of subsidiaries and affiliates and allowances surpassing forecasts through liquidation procedures.
